

Dyslexia: From Theory To Intervention

Role of the ophthalmologist in the management of

DysLexiA

(Specific Learning Difficulties)

Synopsis

- Dyslexia is a brain dysfunction.
- Management must be based on science. Remedial reading intervention is currently the best management.
- There is no credible evidence to support claims for treatments such as vision training/therapy with or without combined neurodevelopmental training, Irlen tinted lenses and the Lawson anti-suppression device.
- The ophthalmologist has a role in the diagnosis and correction of vision deficits. They should help guide the parents towards appropriate remedial assistance for their child.
